

WRITING USER-FRIENDLY DOCUMENTS

1. Introduction

The traditional way of writing government documents has not worked well. Too often, complicated and jargon-filled documents have resulted in frustration, lawsuits, and a lack of trust between citizens and their government. To overcome this legacy, we have a great responsibility to communicate clearly.

Studies show that clearly written regulations improve compliance and decrease litigation. Writing that considers our readers' needs improves the relationship between the government and the public it serves. Clear writing reduces the burden on the public. It also reduces our burden because we don't have to deal with the consequences of unclear communication.

How can we be better writers?

We believe that the most important goals are these--

- Engage your reader
- Write clearly
- Write in a visually appealing style

The next several pages summarize some of the best techniques to achieve these three goals. Following the summary, you'll find detailed suggestions for applying these techniques to your writing.

Guidance on Writing Your Letters

We originally designed this document to give you guidance on how to write plain language regulations. We have now added guidance on letters and notices to those topics for which we think plain language is different than it is for regulations. We've placed the guidance on letters at the end of each topic. If you don't see any guidance specific to letters, you can assume that what we suggest under a topic for regulatory documents works for letters and notices as well. In the future, we hope to add guidance on forms. If anyone has any good material on how to design clear forms, please send it to us.

Engage Your Readers

Engaging your readers sends a message that you have considered who they are and what they need to know. When you communicate a concern for your readers' needs, they are more likely to be receptive to your message.

When your document is plainly written, your readers are more likely to--

- Understand what you want and take appropriate action
- Focus on key information
- Believe that you are concerned with their needs

How can you engage your readers?

You engage readers by speaking to them directly and clearly and by organizing your message in a structure that reflects their interests. Here are some key ways--

Identify your audience

Identify your audience early and think about why the reader needs to read the document. Identify people who will be interested, even if they are not directly affected. Write to everyone who is interested, not just to technical or legal experts. Keep in mind the average reader's level of technical expertise.

Organize to meet your reader's needs

People read documents to get answers. They want to know how to do something or what happens if they don't do something. Organize your document to respond to these concerns. Frequently this means describing events as they occur--you fill out an application to get a benefit, you submit the application, the agency reviews the application, the agency makes a decision on the application.

Think through the questions your readers are likely to ask and then organize them in that order. For regulations, you can organize them into a comprehensive table of contents that will be an outline of the document.

Use a question-and-answer format

As much as possible, write section headings as questions. Try to ask the questions your readers would ask. Answer each question immediately. Using the question-and-answer format helps readers to scan the document and find the information they want. It also increases the chances that they will see a question that they didn't have, but need to know the answer to. This format is enormously helpful to readers.

Use "you" and other pronouns to speak directly to readers

“You” reinforces the message that the document is intended for your reader in a way that “he,” “she,” or “they” cannot. More than any other single technique, using “you” pulls readers into your document and makes it relevant to them. Using “we” to refer to your agency makes your sentences shorter and your document more accessible readers.

Use the active voice

Active voice makes it clear who is supposed to do what. It eliminates ambiguity about responsibilities. Not: “It must be done.” But, “You [or someone else] must do it.”

Use the appropriate tone

In regulations, tone is not really an issue. But the tone of a letter affects how well the reader takes in your message. A cold tone can cause the reader to tune out the message. In some cases, it causes him to put down the letter rather than attempting to read it at all. Select the tone based on who your reader is and what his or her circumstances are.

Write Clearly

For years, most of us have addressed our documents mainly to technical experts and lawyers, rather than to the many other readers we want to influence. A jargon-laden, legalistic style does not clearly convey important information. You can reduce confusion or misinterpretation for all readers without sacrificing the technical integrity of your writing.

How can you write more clearly?

Government documents such as regulations present special challenges because of the highly technical information they often contain. At the same time, you have multiple audiences, some highly knowledgeable, some less so. In fact, focus-group results show that even technical experts do not always understand technical language easily or quickly. The following techniques will help ensure that you keep your language clear, so that your users can focus on technical information.

Use short sentences

Express only one idea in each sentence. Long, complicated sentences often mean that you aren't clear about what you want to say. Shorter sentences show clear thinking. Shorter sentences are also better for conveying complex information; they break the information up into smaller, easier-to-process units. Vary your sentence structure to avoid choppiness, but don't revert to tangled multi-clause sentences.

Write to one person, not to a group

Use singular nouns, pronouns, and verbs to direct your writing to one individual reader. This prevents confusion about whether a requirement applies to readers acting individually or in groups.

Use the simplest tense you can

Using present tense avoids the clutter of compound verbs and clearly conveys what is standard practice.

Use “must” to convey requirements

Use “must” for obligation, “may” for permission, and “should” for preference. Use “may not” to convey prohibitions. Avoid the ambiguous “shall.” When was the last time you heard “shall” in everyday conversation? If you must include advisory material, put it in brackets.

Place words carefully

There are several ways you can reduce ambiguity--

- Keep subjects and objects close to their verbs.
- Put conditionals such as “only” or “always” and other modifiers next to the words they modify. Write “you are required to provide only the following,” not “you are only required to provide the following.”
- Put long conditions after the main clause. Write “complete form 9-123 if you own more than 50 acres and cultivate grapes,” not “if you own more than 50 acres and cultivate grapes, complete form 9-123.”

Use "if-then" tables

If material is particularly complex and many conditional situations are involved, put it in an “if-then” table.

Avoid words and constructions that cause confusion

Common sources of confusion include--

- Undefined or overused abbreviations and acronyms
- Two different terms used for the same thing (car, vehicle, auto, conveyance--choose one)
- Giving an obscure technical or legal meaning to a word commonly understood to mean something different (defining “car” to include trucks)
- Legal, technical, and “fashionable,” but confusing, jargon
- Strings of nouns forming complex constructions (surface water quality protection procedures)

- Pronouns that don't clearly refer to specific nouns
- Stilted, wordy language

Use contractions when appropriate

Contractions can speed reading, improve accuracy, and sometimes soften the tone of your letters.

Write in a visually appealing style

We want our documents to help readers get information, comply with requirements, and apply for benefits with the minimum possible burden. Visually appealing documents are far easier to understand than more traditional styles.

Traditional government documents are often dense and confusing. Replace blocks of text with headings, tables, and more white space. You will help your reader by making the main points readily apparent and grouping related items together. Use a clear and uncrowded presentation and your readers will be more likely to understand what you want to convey. In turn, your readers will be more likely to do what you want them to do in their dealings with your agency.

How can you make your documents visually appealing?

With visual layout, you draw your readers' attention to information they need to know. Even though various government requirements, such as the Code of Federal Regulations (CFR) format, constrain government writers in a number of ways, you can still take significant steps to make your documents visually appealing to the reader.

Use lots of informative headings

Headings attract your readers' attention to important information. They help readers find their way through a document and locate important points.

Pack each heading with lots of information. How often have you seen several different sections entitled "applications" or "appeals" in one set of regulations? Applications for what? Appeals of what? If you say "Applications for underground mining permits on public land" the reader knows exactly what you're talking about, and knows the difference between that section and another section entitled "Applications for a temporary use permit to transport cattle across public land."

On the other hand, headings should not be so long that they overwhelm the material in the section itself.

Write short sections

Short sections break up the material into easily understood segments and allow you to introduce a little white space. Short sections look easier to read and understand. Long sections can appear difficult and forbidding, even before someone tries to read them.

Include only one issue in each designated paragraph

Limiting each paragraph to one issue gives the document a clean appearance and contributes to the impression that it is easy to read and understand. By presenting only one issue in each designated paragraph, you can use informative headings that reflect the entire issue covered by the paragraph.

Use vertical lists

Vertical lists highlight a series of requirements or other information in a visually clear way. Use vertical lists to help your reader focus on important material.

Vertical lists--

- Highlight levels of importance
- Help the reader understand the order in which things happen
- Make it easy for the reader to identify all necessary steps in a process
- Add blank space for easy reading

Use tested emphasis techniques to highlight important points

Emphasis techniques are useful to draw the readers attention to a line or two. You should use techniques like bold and italics that have been tested on readers; they draw the reader's attention to the area and are easy to read. You shouldn't use ALL CAPS; they're much harder to read.

2. More About Techniques for Better Writing

This section provides examples of how to use the techniques listed in the introduction. The examples are drawn from different agencies across the Federal government. Because this guidance was written initially for regulations writers, most of the examples are from regulations. You won't find any of these exact examples in the Code of Federal Regulations. We've altered them to provide what we think are better examples of the techniques we recommend.

In the rest of this handbook, we've used the symbols below to help indicate visually the points we're making.

We've used ...	to indicate ...
✓	particularly important concepts
▼▼▼▼	bad examples of plain English
▲▲▲▲	our suggestions for a better presentation of the same subject matter
italics	examples of text

Identify Your Audience

✓ Identify who is affected by a document and write to get their attention and answer their questions.

You have to grab your readers' attention if you want to get your ideas across. Let's face it, readers just want to know what applies to them. The best way to grab and hold their attention is to figure out who they are and what they want to know. Put yourself in their shoes. It will give you a new perspective.

Tell your readers why the material is important to them. Say, "If you want a research grant, here's what you have to do." Or, "If you want to mine Federal coal, here's what you should know." Or, "If you are planning a trip to Rwanda, read this first."

Identifying your audience should do more than just cause you to make sure the terms you use are clear. It should help you focus on the reader's needs. You should do this by thinking about what your reader knows about the situation now. Then think about how to guide them from their current knowledge base to what you need them to know. To help you do this, try answering the following questions--

- Who is the reader?
- Is there a secondary reader we need to give information?
- What does the reader(s) already know about the subject?
- What questions will the reader(s) have?
- What's the best outcome for my agency? What do I need to say to get this outcome?
- What's the best outcome for the reader? What do I need to say to get this outcome?

You need to guide your readers from Point A to Point B in as straight a line as possible. To do this, you must anticipate the questions they have about where to step next.

Many times a document has more than one audience. You may be talking to exporters and importers, or coal miners and surface owners, or airlines and passengers. NEPA documents typically speak to both stakeholders and agency decision makers. Break your documents down into essential elements and determine which elements apply to each part of your audience. Then group the elements according to who is affected. If you are writing about research grants, first tell the professors what they have to do, then tell the university accounting department what it has to do.

Identify clearly who you are speaking to in each section. Don't make a reader go through material only to find out at the end that the section doesn't apply.

▼▼▼▼	▲▲▲▲
Grant applications must provide the following information: (a) Prior experience in the area covered by the grant; (b) Publications relevant to the area of the grant; (c) Other grants held at the time of application; (d) Name and address of the chief financial officer; (e) Nature of in-kind match being provided; (f) Approved overhead rate; and (g) Total proposed budget.	(a) When you apply for a grant, you must send us: (1) A description of your experience in the area covered by the grant; and (2) Copies of any material that you have published relevant to the area of the grant. (b) Your financial office must send us-- (1) The name and address of the chief financial officer; (2) A description of the in-kind match you will provide; (3) Your approved overhead rate; and (4) A proposed budget.

Identify your Audience In Letters

In a letter it is pretty easy to identify who your audience is; it is usually the person you are writing to. However, you must also consider any additional readers. For instance, if you write to a member of congress about a constituent problem, the office of the member of congress may attach a cover letter and send it on to the constituent without any further explanation. Therefore, you must write so that both audiences understand your letter.

✓ Write to address your readers and their interests.

Organize to meet your readers' needs

✓ Well-organized, detailed tables of contents make it easy for the reader to identify all elements in a series.

Part of serving your readers better is organizing your regulation or other document so that they can understand how a program works and where to find instructions for each step they need to complete. Your table of contents should be a reliable road map that readers can follow to get through a process painlessly. The table of contents below is organized in a logical sequence for a discretionary grant program. The organization follows the order in which events occur and the order in which the public might ask questions about the program.

Part 791: Javits Gifted and Talented Students

Subpart A: How the Grant Program Works

Sec.

- 791.1 What is the Javits Gifted and Talented Students Education Program?
- 791.2 Am I eligible for a Javits Grant?
- 791.3 What activities are appropriate for Javits Grant funding?
- 791.4 What funding priorities may the Secretary establish?
- 791.5 What other regulations apply to the Javits Grant?
- 791.6 What definitions apply to the Javits Grant?

Subpart B: How to Apply for an Award

- 791.10 Where do I write to obtain a Javits Grant application?
- 791.11 What materials do I need to submit to be considered for a Javits Grant?
- 791.12 Where do I send my application?
- 791.13 When is my application due?

Subpart C: How the Secretary Makes an Award

- 791.20 How will the Secretary evaluate my application for a Javits Grant?
- 791.21 What selection criteria does the Secretary use to award Javits Grants?
- 791.22 Does the Secretary consider additional factors?

Subpart D: Grantees' Rights and Responsibilities

- 791.30 Under what conditions may I use my Javits Grant award?
791.31 What are my responsibilities for serving students and teachers in private schools?

The same organization works well for almost any type of regulation. Here's an example of an administrative regulation--

Part 725--CLAIMS FOR BENEFITS UNDER THE FEDERAL MINE SAFETY AND HEALTH ACT

General

- 725.1 What does this program cover?
725.2 What special terms do I need to know to understand this part?

Who is Covered

- 725.201 Who is entitled to benefits under this program?
725.202 How long can my benefits last?
725.203 Are my dependents entitled to benefits?
725.204 How long will their benefits last?
725.205 Am I still eligible if I am convicted of a felony?

How to Apply for Benefits

- 725.301 How do I file a claim?
725.302 Can other people give evidence on my behalf?
725.303 Are there any time limits for filing my claim?
725.304 Can I modify or withdraw my claim?

How to Appeal Agency Decisions

- 725.401 Can I appeal a decision if I don't agree with it?
725.402 How do I file an appeal?
725.403 How long do I have to file an appeal?
725.404 What types of evidence must I submit?
725.405 What happens if I won't get a medical examination?

✓ Organize your table of contents in a logical order that responds to your readers' concerns.

Letters should also be organized to respond to your readers' needs.

Once you've decided who your readers are and what they need to know, the next step is to present the information in an order that will make it easy to understand. Although letters will differ depending on the audience or the subject, your letter should usually have the same basic elements:

Opening Paragraph(s)

Include the following in the opening paragraph--

- The main message up front where the reader can find it.
- A sympathetic opening, if the situation calls for it.
- An overview sentence explaining what the letter is about.

Following Paragraphs

Present information in a logical order--

- In the order the reader would ask about it.
- In chronological order.

Main Message

Always start by putting your main message up front. Some people feel that bad news should be buried. But research shows that readers will always look for the bottom line. When you bury the main message, you only make it harder on your readers.

Readers at Department of Veterans Affairs gave this example. When the message was buried, “Your benefits have been denied,” readers learned to turn to the second page to search for the old and new rating. If it was still the same, they knew their request was denied:

Benefits Denied	Benefits Approved
Old Rating 10%	Old Rating: 10%
New Rating 10%	New Rating: 10%

Sympathetic Opening

Research shows that the tone of a letter does affect how readable it is. A cold mechanical letter can cause readers to turn off before they read your message. That does not mean that we write to a customer the same way we would write to a relative. But it does mean you should use compassion and common sense.

Overview Sentence

While the Main Message is about the subject of the letter, the Overview Sentence is about the content. It's one sentence that acts as a kind of table of contents. If the main message is “Your benefits have been denied. . .” The overview sentence might be, “This letter will explain why we denied your benefits, what you can do if you think we’re wrong, and how long you have to reapply.”

✓ You should present the information in the letter in the same order as you show it in the Overview Sentence.

How does the Overview Sentence compliment the Headings?

Think of your letter as guidance to get from Point A to Point B.

- The overview sentence is like the directions that tells the reader what to look for en route.
- The headings are the road signs that tell the reader when they’ve gotten there.

Use a Question-and-Answer Format

✓ The question-and-answer format is the most efficient way to communicate with your reader.

The reader comes to your document with questions that he or she needs answered. It's much more efficient to anticipate the reader’s questions and pose them as he or she would. By doing this, you make it easier for the reader to find information.

▼▼▼▼ Special Grants for Economic Development and Core Management Grants to Small Tribes	▲▲▲▲ Economic Development and Core Management Grants to Small Tribes
§ 254.11 Indian Rights. § 254.12 Applications. § 254.13 Multi-tribal grants. § 254.14 Administrative requirements. § 254.15 Appeals	§ 254.11 How do the procedures in this part affect Indian rights? § 254.12 How do I apply for a grant under this part? § 254.13. When must I submit my application? § 254.14 Can a multi-tribal organization submit a single grant request? § 254.15 What special information do I need for an application by a multi-tribal organization? § 254.16 Must each tribe in a multi-tribal organization submit certification forms and budgets? § 254.17 If I receive a grant under this part, what requirements must I follow? § 254.18 What reports must I submit after receiving a grant? § 254.19 How can I appeal administrative actions under this part?

The older version of the regulation had short headings that were not helpful to the reader. In the new version, we've identified with the reader and written additional questions that became separate sections.

✓ Use questions questions as section headings, and help your reader find information more quickly.

Letter Headings

Question headings are especially helpful in your letters. Headings in a letter help guide your readers to the points that are relevant to them.

There are three types of headings--

	Definition	Example
Question Heading	A heading in the form of a question	Why Do We Use Headings?
Statement Heading	A heading that uses a noun and a verb	Headings Help Guide a Reader
Topic Heading	A heading that is a word or short phrase	Helpful Headings

Readers read through letters by asking questions. That's why--

- Question Headings are the most useful. They ask the questions that readers are asking and guide them to the answers.
- Statement Headings are the next best choice because they are still very specific.
- Topic Headings are the most formal so many times management is more comfortable with them. But sometimes they're so vague that they just aren't that helpful. For instance, the heading Helpful Headings could be a list of headings or an explanation of why they are helpful.

It is best to stay with just one type of heading. But if that is not possible because the heading is too long and cumbersome, be sure to use no more than two types of headings in one letter.

Use Pronouns to Represent the Reader and to Refer to your Agency

✓ By using "you," you address your reader personally and add immediacy to your document.

When you address the reader as "you," the reader feels that you are addressing him or her directly. Remember that even though your document may affect a thousand or a million people, you are speaking to the one person who is reading it. When your writing reflects this, it is more economical and has a greater impact on the reader. By using "you" to answer the reader's questions, you clarify whom you are addressing.

▼▼▼▼	▲▲▲▲
Copies of tax returns must be provided.	You must provide copies of your tax returns.

Writing for an individual reader forces you to analyze carefully what you want the reader to do. By writing to an individual, you will find it easier to--

- Put information in a logical order
- Answer questions and provide the information that your reader wants to know
- Assign responsibilities and requirements clearly

Be sure to define “you” clearly.

▼▼▼▼	▲▲▲▲
Public Access to Information	Public Access to Information
Facilities in regional and district offices are available to the public during normal business hours for requesting ...	If you are a member of the public, you can get copies of our records at any regional district office ...

Define “you” by any of the following methods--

- State in the beginning of the document who the audience is--“This regulation tells you, a loan applicant, how to secure a loan.”
- Define “you” in the Definitions section--“You” means a loan applicant.
- Where you address different readers in different parts of the document, define “you” in each context-- “How do different types of borrowers apply for a loan? If you are a small business, you must submit . . . If you are an individual, you must submit . . .”

▼▼▼▼	▲▲▲▲
Who is responsible for restoring the site?	Who is responsible for restoring the site?
Lessees and operators are responsible for restoring the site. You must ensure that ...	Lessees and operators are responsible for restoring the site. If you are the operator, you must conduct all operations in a way ... If you are the lessee, you must monitor the operator to ensure that ...

Be careful using “you” in letters.

It’s important not to use “you” if it sounds accusatory or insulting. That does not mean that you should put your letter in passive voice. Instead, put the emphasis on the agency by using “we.”

▼▼▼▼	▲▲▲▲
You were not very clear.	We did not understand your message.
You did not send a payment.	We did not receive your payment.

✓ Use “I” to refer to the reader in section headings.

The question-and-answer format assumes that the reader is the one asking the questions. Therefore, use “I” in questions to refer to the reader. Do not use “I” in responses. In responses your agency (represented by “we”) addresses the reader. By using “I” to ask questions in headings, you are anticipating questions the reader may have.

▼▼▼▼	▲▲▲▲
Submission of applications.	What must I do if I want a loan?

✓ Use “we” to refer to your agency.

Use “we” to refer to your agency in the text of the regulation. By using “we” to respond to questions, you state clearly what your agency requires and what your agency’s responsibilities are. You also avoid the passive and use fewer words. Since you will never be asking the questions (only the reader does that), you should not use “we” in section headings. You can define “we” in the definitions sections of your document if that will help the reader.

▼▼▼▼	▲▲▲▲
Loan applications will be reviewed to ensure that procedures have been followed.	We review your loan application to ensure that you have followed our procedures.
The Office of Consumer Affairs will process your application within 30 days after receipt.	We’ll process your application within 30 days of receiving it.

✓ Address the reader as “you.” Use “I” to represent the reader in section headings. Use “we” in place of your agency name. You'll save words and make your document more readable.

Use Active Voice

✓ Active voice is the best way to identify who is responsible for what action.

In an active sentence, the person or agency taking an action is the subject of the sentence. In a passive sentence, the person or item that is acted upon is the subject of the sentence. Passive sentences often do not identify who is performing the action.

▼▼▼▼	▲▲▲▲
The lake was polluted by the company.	The company polluted the lake.
New regulations were proposed.	We proposed new regulations.
The following information must be included in the application for it be considered complete.	You must include the following information in your complete application.
Bonds will be withheld in cases of non-compliance with all permits and conditions.	We will withhold your bond if you don't comply with all permit terms and conditions.

More than any other writing technique, using active voice and specifying who is taking an action will change the character of our writing.

How do you identify passive sentences?

Passive sentences have two basic features, although both do not appear in every passive sentence.

- A past participle (generally with "ed" on the end); and
- A form of the verb "to be."

▼▼▼▼	▲▲▲▲
Regulations have been proposed by the Department of Veterans Affairs.	We have proposed regulations.
The permit will be approved by the agency's State office.	Our State office must approve your permit.

In a very few instances, passive voice may be appropriate. For example, when one action follows another as a matter of law, and there is no actor (besides the law itself) for the second action, a passive sentence may be the best method of expression.

▲▲▲▲
If you do not pay the royalty on your mineral production, your lease will be terminated [by the action of the law].

✓ To communicate effectively, write the strong majority of your sentences in the active voice.

Choose the right tone for your documents

✓ Make sure your tone doesn't turn your readers off and prevent them from responding to your documents the way you need them to.

Tone is important in all documents, but especially in letters and notices. The tone of your letter will project your attitude to the reader. Although you can't hear it, tone in a letter has much the same effect as it has when you speak to someone. What's your reaction when someone speaks to you in a cold tone? Do you tune out of the conversation; pay more attention to the tone than the content; or walk away? Readers do much the same thing. When the tone of a letter is cold or harsh, many times readers will put down the letter and pick up the telephone.

How do you create a professional, compassionate tone?

There are several different techniques that you can use to create a professional, compassionate tone, depending on the content of your letter--

- Focus on the reader by using “you” and active voice,
- Use a sympathetic opening when appropriate,
- Apologize when we have done something wrong; and
- Use terms like “we regret” or “unfortunately” when delivering bad news.

Use “you” and active voice in your letters to focus on your reader.

One of the worst tone offenders in government writing is referring to people as if they were inanimate objects. Nothing turns people off more than being spoken to as if they were just a number. In the example below, the only two changes to the sentences are the use of “you” and active voice.

Can you feel the difference in the tone?

▼▼▼▼	▲▲▲▲
The leg injury is disabling, therefore, the payee is entitled to benefits.	We found that you have a disabling leg injury, therefore, you are entitled to benefits.

Sympathetic Opening

A sympathetic opening should be used only when appropriate. For instance, if you are writing to a recent widow who is asking questions about benefits, you may want to start the letter by saying: “We are sorry to hear about the death of your husband.” If, however, this is the fourth letter you've sent to the same widow, don't just add the line by rote.

Apologies

If you are writing to correct a mistake your agency made, you should start out by apologizing for the error. Or, at the least, acknowledge that you made a mistake. And please do it in active voice.

▼▼▼▼	▲▲▲▲
An error was made in calculating your refund.	We are sorry. We made a mistake when we calculated your refund.

A sympathetic opening should be no more than a line or two. The sympathetic opening is important, but it should not bury the main message.

Delivering Bad News

When delivering bad news, it helps to temper the situation by prefacing the statement with a term like--

- We regret
- We're sorry
- Unfortunately

Example: Unfortunately, we cannot approve your application.

In each situation, you must determine which term you find more comfortable. Is it necessary to deliver bad news in this manner? No. But it sets a tone that may keep your customer reading. And if you think about it, this is the way we usually handle things in person. In person we frequently say, "I'm sorry but you don't qualify for this benefit." But many times in letters we just jump right in with, "You are not qualified for this benefit." Which version would you rather receive?

Break your material into short sentences

✓ Use short sentences to deliver a clear message.

The best way to tell your reader what you want is a short, straightforward sentence. Complex sentences loaded with dependent clauses and exceptions confuse the reader by losing the main point in a forest of words. Resist the temptation to put everything in one sentence; break up your idea into its various parts and make each one the subject of its own sentence.

▼▼▼▼	▲▲▲▲
For good reasons, the Secretary may grant extensions of time in 30-day increments for filing of the lease and all required bonds, provided that additional extension requests are submitted and approved before the expiration of the original 30 days or the previously granted extension.	We may extend the time you have to file the lease and required bonds. Each extension will be for a 30-day period. To get an extension, you must write to us giving the reasons that you need more time. We must receive your extension request in time to approve it before your current deadline or extension expires.

Complexity is the greatest enemy of clear communication. You may need to be especially inventive to translate complicated provisions into more manageable language. In the following example, we have made an “if” clause into a separate sentence. By beginning the first sentence with “suppose that” and the second sentence with “in this case,” we have preserved the relationship between the two.

▼▼▼▼	▲▲▲▲
If you take less than your entitled share of production for any month, but you pay royalties on the full volume of your entitled share in accordance with the provisions of this section, you will owe no additional royalty for that lease for prior periods when you later take more than your entitled share to balance your account. This also applies when the other participants pay you money to balance your account.	Suppose that one month you pay royalties on your full share of production but take less than your entitled share. In this case, you may balance your account in one of the following ways without having to pay more royalty. You may either: (a) Take more than your entitled share in the future; or (b) Accept money from other participants.

✓ Short sentences pep up and clarify your text and hold the reader's interest.

Address One Person, Not a Group

✓ Singular nouns and verbs prevent confusion about whether a requirement applies to individual readers or to groups.

In the following example, the reader doesn't know whether each applicant must file applications at several offices, or whether applicants who are members of a group must file individual requests.

▲▲▲▲	▼▼▼▼
Individuals and organizations wishing to apply must file applications with the appropriate offices in a timely manner.	You must apply at least 30 days before you need the certification. (a) If you are an individual, apply at the State office in the State where you reside. (b) If you are an organization, apply at the State office in the State where your headquarters is located.

In addressing a single person, you can avoid awkwardness by using "you" to address the reader directly, rather than using "his or her" or "he or she."

▲▲▲▲	▼▼▼▼
The applicant must provide his or her mailing address and his or her identification number.	You must provide your mailing address and identification number.

Your reader probably will need only a single permit, application, or license. Thus, writing in the singular means that it will apply to the reader as written, eliminating the need to "translate."

✓ Use the singular whenever possible.

Use present tense whenever possible

✓ A document written in the present tense is more immediate and less complicated.

Using the present tense makes your document more direct and forceful. The more you use conditional or future tense, the harder your reader has to work to understand your meaning. Writing entirely in the present tense saves your reader work and helps you to make your point clearly.

▼▼▼▼	▲▲▲▲
These sections describe types of information that would satisfy the application requirements of Circular A-110 as it would apply to this grant program.	These sections tell you how to meet the requirements of Circular A-110 for this grant program.

Even if you are covering an event that occurred in the past, you can clarify the material for your reader by writing as much as possible in the present tense.

▲▲▲▲	▼▼▼▼
Applicants who were Federal employees at the time that the injury was sustained should have filed a compensation request at that time. Failure to do so could have an effect on the degree to which the applicant can be covered under this part.	You may not be covered under this part if: (a) You were a Federal employee at the time of the injury; and (b) You did not file a report with us at that time.

You help your reader understand and relate to your document if you eliminate the need for him or her to “translate” the text from the past or conditional tense into the present. Remember, the less work your reader has to do to understand, the better he or she can follow your instructions.

Occasionally, of course, you may need to use other tenses. For example, NEPA documents frequently refer to what may happen in the future if certain events occur. But use tenses other than the present only when necessary for accuracy.

Use the Present Tense In Your Letters

Using present tense applies mostly to regulations and manuals. In a letter you will normally tell a story in the tense that it occurred. If, however, you are giving instructions, present tense is the easiest for your readers to understand.

✓ Write in the present tense to communicate more efficiently.

Use “Must” To Indicate Requirements

✓ The word “must” is the clearest way to convey to your readers that they have to do something.

“Shall” is one of those officious and obsolete words that has encumbered legal style writing for many years. The message that “shall” sends to the reader is, “this is deadly material.” “Shall” is also obsolete; when was the last time you heard it used in everyday speech?

Besides being outdated, “shall” is imprecise. It can indicate either an obligation or a prediction. Dropping “shall” is a major step in making your document more reader friendly. Don't be intimidated by the argument that using “must” will lead to a lawsuit. Many agencies already use the word “must” to convey obligations with no adverse legal effects.

You can avoid “shall” by substituting “must” to indicate an obligation or “will” to indicate that an action will occur in the future. Be careful to consider which meaning you intend to communicate to your readers.

▼▼▼▼	▲▲▲▲
Section 5511.1 Free Use of Timber on Oil and Gas Leases (a) Any oil or gas lessee who wishes to use timber for fuel in drilling operations shall file an application therefor with the officer who issued the lease. (b) The applicant shall be notified by registered mail in all cases where the permit applied for is not granted, and shall be given 30 days within which to appeal such decision. (c) Where the land is occupied by a settler, the applicant shall serve notice on the settler by registered mail showing the amount and kind of timber he has applied for.	Section 5511.1 Can I use the timber on my oil or gas lease for fuel? You must file an application to use the timber on your oil or gas lease for fuel. File the application with our office where you got your lease. Section 5511.12 Will you notify me if you reject my application? Our agency will notify you by registered mail if we reject your application. You must file an appeal of that decision within 30 days. Section 5511.13 Must I notify anyone that I have applied for use of the timber? You must notify any settler, by registered mail, that you have applied to use timber from your lease. Include in your notice: (a) The amount of timber you applied for; and (b) The kind of timber you applied for.

Expressing Requirements In Your Letters

It is true that “must” will clearly tell your readers to do something. In talking about regulations, it is certainly preferred to “shall.” In letter writing, it is more an issue of tone. You can use one of the following to convey your message clearly. It will depend on the attitude you want to convey to your readers. For instance--

- You need to complete this form to apply for benefits.
- You have to send us this information within 30 days.
- You must pay this bill or we will foreclose on your home.

✓ Use “must” to make clear that the reader is required to perform a certain action.

Place Words Carefully

✓ Avoid ambiguous phrasing that can mislead your reader.

How you place words in relation to each other can greatly affect your document. Using short sentences will often make this problem disappear.

In the example below, it is difficult for the reader of the old style provision to figure out which words relate to the forest products, which relate to the tribe, and which relate to the payments.

▼▼▼▼	▲▲▲▲
Upon the request of an Indian tribe, the Secretary may provide that the purchaser of the forest products of such tribe, which are harvested under a timber sale contract, permit, or other harvest sale document, make advance deposits, or direct payments of the gross proceeds of such forest products, less any amounts segregated as forest management deductions pursuant to section 163.25, into accounts designated by such Indian tribe.	If you ask us, we will require purchasers of your forest products to deposit their payment into an account that you designate. (a) You can instruct us to deposit advance payments as well as direct payments into the account. (b) We will withhold from the deposit any forest management deductions under section 163.25.

You will eliminate many potential sources of ambiguity by writing shorter sentences. The less complex the sentence, the clearer the meaning and the smaller the chance of ambiguity creeping in. Still, you must watch how you place words even in short sentences. In the example below, the reader may have to read the original statement several times to figure out that we don’t mean “If you really want to have a disability . . .”

▼▼▼▼	▲▲▲▲
If you are determined to have a disability, we will pay you the following:	If we determine that you have a disability, we will pay you the following:

As you write, place your words with care to avoid possible misinterpretations or muddled meanings. A carefully written document is clear, concise, and unambiguous.

✓ Draft your document with care to eliminate unclear phrasing.

Use tables to make complex material easier to understand

✓ If-then tables are an ideal way to make complex provisions readily understandable.

If a picture is worth 1,000 words, a table is worth at least 750. By laying out the material visually, tables help your reader see relationships in a way that dense text never can. No reader would dispute that the rewritten regulation below is far clearer than the dense text it replaces.

▼▼▼▼
§ 163.25 Forest management deductions. (a) Pursuant to the provisions of 25 U.S.C. 413 and 25 U.S.C. 3105, a forest management deduction shall be withheld from the gross proceeds of sales of Indian forest land as described in this section. (b) Gross proceeds shall mean the value in money or money's worth of consideration furnished by the purchaser of forest products purchased under a contract, permit, or other document for the sale of forest products. (c) Forest management deductions shall not be withheld where the total consideration furnished under a document for the sale of forest products is less than $5,001. (d) Except as provided in § 163.25(e) of this part, the amount of the forest deduction shall not exceed the lesser amount of ten percent (10%) of the gross proceeds or, the actual percentage in effect on November 28, 1990. (e) The Secretary may increase the forest management deduction percentage for Indian forest land upon receipt of a written request from a tribe supported by a written resolution executed by the authorized tribal representatives. At the request of the authorized tribal representatives and at the discretion of the Secretary the forest management deduction percentage may be decreased to not less than one percent (1%) or the requirement for collection may be waived.

§ 163.25 What forest management deductions will BIA withhold?

We will withhold a forest management deduction if the contract for the sale of forest products has a value of over $5,000. The deduction will be a percentage of the gross proceeds (i.e., the price we get from the buyer). We will determine the amount of the deduction in accordance with the following table.

If ...	then the percentage of the deduction is ...
a tribe requests an increase in the deduction through a tribal resolution and written request to us	the percentage requested by the tribe.
an authorized tribal representative requests and we approve a decrease in the deduction	the percentage requested, with a one percent minimum.
an authorized tribal representative requests and we approve a waiver of the deduction	waived.
none of the above conditions apply	the percentage in effect on November 28, 1990, or 10 percent, whichever is less.

You can also use variations on the if-then table to clarify other types of complicated provisions. Which of the following would you rather read?

§ 163.17 Deposit with bid.

(a) A deposit shall be made with each proposal for the purchase of Indian forest products. Such deposits shall be at least:

(1) Ten (10) percent if the appraised stumpage value is less than $100,000 in any event not less than $1,000 or full value whichever is less.

(2) Five (5) percent if the appraised stumpage value is $100,000 to $250,000 but in any event not less than $10,000; and

(b) Three (3) percent if the appraised stumpage value exceeds $250,000 but in any event not less than $12,500.

§ 163.17 What deposit must I make with my bid?

You must include with your proposal to buy Indian forest products a deposit that meets the conditions in the following table.

If the appraised stumpage value is ...	you must deposit ...	and the minimum amount of the deposit
less than $100,000	ten percent of the stumpage value	$1,000
between $100,000 and $250,000	five percent of the stumpage value	$10,000
over $250,000	three percent of the stumpage value	$12,500

If-then tables are powerful tool for simplifying complicated material. By laying out complex provisions visually, you help the reader to see relationships in a way that dense text never could. Tables almost always use many fewer words that a straight textual explanation would use.

✓ Put complex provisions into tables to save words and make relationships clearer.

Avoid Words and Constructions That Cause Confusion

✓ Your document will be clearer if you avoid words and phrases that your readers might not understand.

Define each abbreviation or acronym the first time you use it.

In general, use abbreviations only to refer to terms that are central to the document. For example, if a regulation is about the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act, you can refer to it as CERCLA. But do not abbreviate terms that you use only one or a few times. Write them out each time. And whatever you do, don't overwhelm your reader with strings of acronyms and abbreviations.

Use the same term consistently to identify a specific thought or object.

For example, if you use the term "senior citizens" to refer to a group, continue to use this term throughout your document. Do not substitute another term, such as "the elderly," which cause the reader to wonder if you are referring to the same group.

Define words in a way that does not conflict with ordinary or accepted usage.

If possible, use a word in a way that is consistent with its everyday meaning rather than creating a new meaning for your document. A change in meaning may confuse the reader, and you create ambiguity if you use the word elsewhere in your document in its ordinary sense. For example, don't redefine "automobile" to refer to vehicles such as motorcycles or large trucks.

Avoid "noun sandwiches."

Too much government writing uses too many noun clusters--groups of nouns "sandwiched" together. Avoid these confusing constructions by using more prepositions and articles to clarify the relationships among the words.

▼▼▼▼	▲▲▲▲
Underground mine worker safety protection procedures development.	Developing procedures to protect the safety of workers in underground mines.

Use pronouns that clearly refer to a specific noun.

If a pronoun could refer to more than one person or object in a sentence, repeat the name of the person or object or rewrite the sentence.

▼▼▼▼	▲▲▲▲
After the Administrator appoints an Assistant Administrator, he or she must ...	After the Administrator appoints an Assistant Administrator, the Assistant Administrator must ...

Avoid confusing legal and technical jargon.

Readers can do without archaic jargon such as "hereafter," "heretofore," and "therewith." See Appendix A, "Words and Expressions to Avoid." There's also a long list of simple words you can substitute for jargon on our web site, plainlanguage.gov, in the reference library.

You may sometimes need to use a technical term to communicate accurately and convey a precise meaning. Don't be cowed into overusing technical terms. The argument that technical terms are "necessary" is greatly overused. Try to substitute everyday language for jargon as often as possible.

Use technical terms only when truly necessary and only when your document will be read only by technical readers. If your document is intended for both technical and non-technical readers, write for the non-technical reader.

Avoid stilted, wordy language.

Wordy, dense construction is one of the biggest problems in government writing. Nothing is more confusing to the reader than long, complex sentences containing multiple phrases and clauses.

▼▼▼▼	▲▲▲▲
If the State Secretary finds that an individual has received a payment to which the individual was not entitled, whether or not the payment was due to the individual's fault or misrepresentation, the individual shall be liable to repay to State the total sum of the payment to which the individual was not entitled.	If the State agency finds that you received a payment that you weren't entitled to, you must pay the entire sum back.

✓ Check your writing for jargon, abbreviations, noun sandwiches, and other constructions that can confuse your reader.

Use contractions to make your writing more accessible

✓ Contractions improve clarity and help your reader.

Yes, Virginia, contractions are acceptable in government writing. They are especially appropriate in letters. But they must be used with discretion. Just as you shouldn't bullet everything on a page, you shouldn't make a contraction out of every possible word in a letter.

Contractions help the reader. Readers are used to hearing words in the contracted form. So, when readers see “would not,” they turn it into “wouldn't.” That means that using contractions speeds reading. Another benefit is that many readers miss the second word and take the exact opposite meaning. They read “would not” as “would.” That doesn't happen when the word is “wouldn't.”

Most people will agree that contractions are less formal than writing out both words. As in any other type of writing, it's important to focus on your reader. If you would speak more formally to someone, then you should probably write to them the same way, without contractions.

In a few cases, there is a difference in tone between the contracted form and the two word form--“can't” and “cannot” or “don't” and “do not.”

More Emphatic Message	Softer Message
------------------------------	-----------------------

You cannot come in now.	You can't come in now.
Do not enter this building.	Don't enter this building.
Do not enter this building without permission.	Don't enter this building without permission.

✓ Use contractions to make your writing more accessible to your readers.

Use lots of informative headings

✓ Headings help readers find their way through a document and locate information they care about.

A document with lots of informative headings is easy to follow. Using more headings helps you break up the document into logical, understandable pieces. Informative headings are more specific and thus more helpful to the reader than are short headings that cover several pieces of information. Questions make excellent headings.

▼▼▼▼	▲▲▲▲
Purpose and policy. Scope.	What does this subpart do?
Information and records available to the public and exempt from disclosure.	How can I get records from SBA. How long will it take for SBA to respond to my request for records.
Public access to information and records.	If SBA grants my request, which records will be supplied?
Business information.	How will SBA respond to business requests for information?

It's often useful to start writing your document by developing the headings, structuring them to your readers' concerns. This approach can also reveal major groupings of information that you might want to identify with centered headings.

Qualifications of permittees and lessees

Who may hold leases and permits?

Can foreign citizens hold permits or leases?

How do I file evidence of my qualifications?

Can I amend my qualifications statement?

Bonding requirements

Must I file a bond with my permit or lease?

Where do I file my bond?

What types of bonds are acceptable?

How does BLM establish bond amounts?

When does BLM terminate my liability under a bond?

On the other hand, headings should not be so long that they overwhelm the material in the section itself. Avoid headings with one word answers.

▼▼▼▼	▲▲▲▲
Do I have to file a newspaper notice of my activities before I begin operations? Yes.	Are there any public notice requirements? You must publish a notice of your operations in a local newspaper before you begin.

Divide Your Letters Into Short Sections and Use Lots of Informative Headings.

Headings will help you keep your sections short, especially if your headings are very specific. Look at your letter when it's completed. If you see sections that are too long, check to see if everything in that section belongs under your heading. If not, it usually means that either your heading is too general or you've chunked information under a heading that does not belong there.

▼▼▼▼ Heading Too General	▲▲▲▲ Break it into Two Sections
------------------------------------	---

Helpful Headings Headings are helpful because they guide a reader to find information. They are also helpful because they help the writer to organize. Headings come in several types including topic, statement, and questions. All of these headings help outline the document for both the reader and writer. An example of a topic heading is “Benefit Information.” And example of a statement is ...	Why are Headings Helpful? Headings are helpful because they guide a reader to find information. They are also helpful because they help the writer to organize. Headings help outline the document for both the reader and writer. Headings come in several types including-- <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • topic • statement • questions An example of a topic heading is “Benefit Information.” An example of a statement heading is ...
---	---

✓ Develop your headings carefully. They are one of the most useful tools you can use to develop an appealing, understandable document.

Break your material into short, understandable sections

✓ Short sections break up material into easily understood segments that are visually appealing to the reader.

Short sections are easier to organize and understand. Long sections are confusing and visually unappealing.

▼▼▼▼▼	▲▲▲▲▲
§ 2653.30 Native group selections. (a) Selections must not exceed the amount recommended by the regional corporation or 320 acres for each Native member of a group, or 7,680 acres for each Native group, whichever is less. Native groups must identify any acreage over that as alternate selections and rank their selections. Beyond the reservations in sections 2650.32 and 2650.46 of this Part, conveyances of lands in a National Wildlife Refuge are subject to the provisions of section 22(g) of ANCSA and section 2651.41 of this chapter as though they were conveyances to a village corporation. (b) Selections must be contiguous and the total area selected must be compact except where separated by lands that are unavailable for selection. BLM will not consider the selection compact if it excludes lands available for selection within its exterior boundaries; or an isolated tract of public land of less than 640 acres remains after selection. The lands selected must be in quarter sections where they are available unless exhaustion of the group’s entitlement does not allow the selection of a quarter section. The selection must include all available lands in less than quarter sections. Lands selected must conform as nearly as practicable to the United States lands survey system.	§ 2653.31 What are the selection criteria for Native group selections and what lands are available? You may select only the amount recommended by the regional corporation or 320 acres for each Native member of a group, or 7,680 acres for each Native group, whichever is less. You must identify any acreage over 7,680 as alternate selections and rank their selection. § 2653.32 What are the restrictions in conveyances to Native groups? Beyond the reservations described in this part conveyances of lands in a National Wildlife Refuge are subject to section 22(g) of ANCSA as though they were conveyances to a village. § 2653.33 Do Native group selections have to be contiguous? Yes, selections must be contiguous. The total area you select must be compact except where separated by lands that are unavailable for selection. BLM will not consider your selection if: (a) It excludes lands available for selection within its exterior boundaries; or (b) An isolated tract of public land of less than 640 acres remains after selection. § 2653.34 How small a parcel can I select? Select lands in quarter sections where they are available unless there is not enough left in your group’s entitlement to allow this. Your election must include all available lands in areas that are smaller than quarter sections. Conform your selection as much as possible to the United States land survey system.

Short sections also give you more opportunity to insert informative headings in your material. Remember that boldface section headings give your reader’s the best roadmap to your document.. Long sections are impossible to summarize meaningfully in a heading. When you write short sections, each heading can give the reader information about the entire contents of the section.

✓ Write short sections that are easy for you to organize and for the reader to follow.

Cover only one topic in each paragraph

✓Limit each paragraph or section to one topic to help the reader follow the document.

Separating different topics into paragraphs is another way to help your reader understand your document. By making sure that each topic is in a separate paragraph, you give the reader a better idea of the underlying organization.

Good paragraphing is similar to using tables because it shows your reader the important issues and their relationship to subordinate topics. This is especially true because the new paragraphs that you identify often become subparagraphs.

▼▼▼▼	▲▲▲▲
(a) Notice of a bid advertisement shall be published in at least one local newspaper and in one trade publication at least 30 days in advance of sale. If applicable, the notice must identify the reservation within which the tracts to be leased are found. Specific descriptions of the tracts shall be available at the office of the superintendent. The complete text of the advertisement shall be mailed to each person listed on the appropriate agency mailing list.	(a) We will publish an advertisement to solicit bids 30 days before the sale. (1) We will publish the notice in at least one local newspaper and in one trade publication. (2) The notice will identify any reservation within which the tracts to be leased are found. (3) We will mail the complete text of the advertisement to each person listed on the appropriate agency mailing list. (b) Specific descriptions of the tracts will be available at the superintendent's office.

As the example above shows, indentations and “white space” greatly improve the readability of your rule. When you use separate paragraphs for each idea, you show your reader how the regulation is organized and which ideas are more important.

Limiting each paragraph to one topic is important in letters, too.

Whether you are writing a regulation or a letter, the idea of limiting paragraphs to one idea is an important key to clarity. Here's a segment from a Veterans Administration's letter. The letter and the rewrite are taken from their Reader Focus Writing Handbook. In the first example, the original in one paragraph is not only overwhelming, it's hard to understand just what you are entitled to without reading it several times.

One Paragraph Example: In the first example, so much information is given in the paragraph that it's hard to understand any of it.

If, due to your active military status, you will suffer a reduction of income and find it difficult to maintain your mortgage obligation, the Act provides that the interest rate of your mortgage can be reduced to 6 percent per annum until your period of active duty has ended. You will incur no penalty or obligation to repay the forgiven interest amount. Therefore, you should inform the holder of your mortgage (or its agent) of your inability to continue the payments required by your mortgage contract. If you have already fallen behind in your monthly payments, the holder of your loan can defer payment of the delinquent amount until your period of active duty has ended, and at that time you should make arrangements for a repayment schedule.

Two Paragraph Example: In this second example, the information is broken into two separate paragraphs: one about the type of protection you can receive; the other about how to qualify. Notice that the first paragraph is even easier to follow because it uses a vertical list.

This is the protection you can receive until your period of active duty service has ended:

- Your mortgage holder can reduce your annual interest rate to 6%.
- You will not have to pay a penalty or the forgiven interest amount (the amount (the amount above the 6% rate).
- Your mortgage holder can postpone payment of any money you may now owe.

To qualify for this protection, you must tell the mortgage holder that you will lose income while you are in active service, and it will be hard to keep up your mortgage payments. You should also make arrangements for a repayment schedule.

Reminder: Remember to show the mortgage holder a copy of your order to report to active duty.

✓ Put only one topic in each paragraph to help your reader keep each idea separate.

Use lots of lists

✓ Vertical lists highlight important topics and make it easy for the reader to identify all elements in a series.

Vertical lists are much more appealing visually and easier to read than running text. They make your documents appear less dense and make it easier to spot main ideas. They are also an ideal way to present items, conditions, and exceptions.

▼▼▼▼	▲▲▲▲
Each completed well drilling application must contain a detailed statement including the following information: the depth of the well, the casing and cementing program, the circulation media (mud, air, foam, etc.), the expected depth and thickness of fresh water zones, and well site layout and design.	With your application for a drilling permit, provide the following information: (a) Depth of the well; (b) Casing and cementing program; (c) Circulation media (mud, aid, form, etc.); (d) Expected depth and thickness of fresh water zones; and (e) Well site layout and design.

Vertical lists are also helpful in clarifying the chronological order of steps in a process.

▲▲▲▲
When a foreign student presents a completed Form I-20: (a) Enter the student’s admission number from Form 94; (b) Endorse all copies of the form; (c) Return a copy to the student; and (d) Send a copy to the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

However, you can over-use vertical lists. Remember to use them to highlight important information, not to over-emphasize trivial matters.

Use Lots of Lists In Your Letters and Instructions

Vertical lists highlight important topics and make it easy for the reader to identify all elements in a series of requirements or procedures. In the example below, we’ve created a kind of a checklist for the reader.

▼▼▼▼	▲▲▲▲
When you come to class you should bring a tablet, a pen or pencil, the form you just completed, two copies of your 171, and a resume if you have one.	When you come to class you should bring the following-- <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • A tablet • A pen or pencil • The form you just completed • Two copies of your 171 • A resume (if you already have one)

Normally you should use solid round or square bullets for a letter. Bullets are not the place to be overly creative. Large creative bullets with strange shapes tend to distract the reader. However, in some circumstances numbers are a helpful option. You can best use numbers when you are highlighting the order of steps in a process, or when you are making a point that there are a certain number of items in the list. See the examples below--

When to Use Numbers for Your Vertical List
Chronological Order	Highlighting the Number of Items
There are several steps to apply-- <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Complete the application. 2. Sign the application. 3. Have your supervisor review and sign the application. 4. Keep the bottom copy. 5. Return the rest of the application to Human Resources. 	We need to know your opinion about the location of our annual meeting. We narrowed it down to three choices-- <ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Our own office complex 2. White House Conference Center 3. Cameron Hotel
Numbering the list above emphasizes that the student should keep a copy signed by the supervisor.	Numbering the list above reinforces the three choices mentioned in the introductory sentence.

Some Other Rules About Vertical Lists

Here are some additional rules you should follow to make it easier to read your vertical lists.

- Always use a lead-in sentence to explain your lists.
- It is helpful to indent your vertical list from the lead-in sentence margin.
- Never center a vertical list.

▼▼▼▼▼	▲▲▲▲▲
Classroom supplies <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • A tablet • A pen or pencil • The paperwork you sent us when you first applied for class 	Classroom Supplies When you come to class, you should bring the following-- <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • A tablet • A pen or pencil • The paperwork you sent us when you first applied for class.
Without a lead-in sentence, it is not clear who is to bring the supplies to class. Centering the bullets may make a nice pattern, but it makes it very difficult to see where statements begin and end.	In this sample the lead-in sentence makes it clear who is to bring the supplies to class. Indenting makes it easier to see how the information is chunked.

✓ Use vertical lists to attract the reader's eye to important information and to break up large pieces of information.

Use emphasis to highlight important concepts

✓ Use bold and italics to make important concepts stand out.

While it is difficult to use these techniques in regulations, emphasis techniques, like a combination of bold and italics, help bring out important points in your letters and other documents. The most important rule to remember is to limit emphasis techniques to important information. Putting everything in bold, for instance, is like shouting all the time. It makes it impossible for the reader to know what is really important.

Using vertical lists is also another way of emphasizing information. Here too, you don't want to overuse the technique. So, even if you can make a vertical list out of everything on the page, don't do it. Choose things that need the most emphasis. For instance, you may want to emphasize a list of what you want students to bring to class, rather than a list of what the teacher will supply.

PUTTING EVERYTHING IN CAPITAL LETTERS IS NOT A GOOD EMPHASIS TECHNIQUE. ALTHOUGH IT MAY DRAW THE READER'S ATTENTION TO THE SECTION, IT MAKES IT HARDER TO READ.

Similarly, underlining will draw the reader's attention to the section, but it makes it hard on the eyes. In both of these cases, it is better to use bold and italics for only the important issues.

Using “Notes” or “Reminders” in bold and italics is a very effective way to emphasize information. Keep in mind that “Reminders” should only be used to reinforce information. “Notes” can be used for anything.

Using Reminders for Emphasis	Using Notes for Emphasis
How Do I Apply? Please do the following within 31 days: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Complete the application • Sign the application • Return it to the following address: XXXXXXXXXXXX XXXXXXXXXXXX XXXXXXXXXXXX Reminder: You must return the application within 31 days.	How Do I Apply? Please do the following within 31 days: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Complete the application • Sign the application • Return it to the following address: XXXXXXXXXXXX XXXXXXXXXXXX XXXXXXXXXXXX Note: Be sure to complete the application on the next page.

✓ Use emphasis techniques wisely, don't overuse them or they lose their power.

APPENDIX A

Avoid these Words and Expressions

abeyance
above [as an adjective]
afore-granted aforementioned aforesaid
before-mentioned
henceforward hereby herein hereinafter hereinbefore
hereunto pursuant said [as a substitute for “the”, “that”, or those] same [as a substitute for “it”, “he”, “him”, “she”, or “her”] thenceforth
thereunto
to wit
under-mentioned
unto whatsoever whenever whereas whereof whosoever within-named witnesseth